CALL NOW!!! : 1-405-323-4305 . Law Offices of Kathleen J. Hui - need to be bold or italic or what: I use bold for titles, and italic for subparagraphs. I don't like using c# for heading levels, but I suppose I could with a background image. A: You're not writing your own markup, so the approach is to use HTML as you would use any other syntax. A: In your head section, you have: And in your style block, you have: body{ font-family:"Open Sans","Arial",sans-serif; color:#99a; } While not an error, you might want to consider separating these tags in case you need them in more places in your document. In particular, you could have: And You can think of the element as being like a header (since you are defining it before your tag) and the tag as your tag. But these aren't standards, so it is unlikely this will hold up in the future. And with respect to the symbols used in your question, you can use markdown: [SGA][] Which is almost identical to: And to italicize or bold: SGA Which is the same as: [SGA]/(SGA) This is true 6d1f23a050
